

A principal difference between a longitudinal study and a cross-sectional study is the

A principal difference between a longitudinal study and a cross-sectional study is the

- A. number of participants involved.
- B. developmental stage of the participants.
- C. time span of the study.
- D. statistical methods employed to evaluate the data.