

Ali has ___ his hand but he is feeling better now.

Ali has ___ his hand but he is feeling better now.

- A. hurted
- B. hurt
- C. been hurted
- D. had been hurted

Show Answer...

Correct Answer: B (Hurt)

Explanation:

The correct option is 'Hurt'. In English, 'Hurt' is an irregular verb which means its past simple and past participle forms are also 'Hurt'. Therefore, the sentence "Ali has hurt his hand but he is feeling better now" is correct. 'Hurted' and 'Been Hurted' are incorrect forms and do not exist in English.

Deciphering the English Language: Irregular Verbs

Understanding Irregular Verbs

Unlike regular verbs in English, which usually end in 'ed' in their past simple and past participle forms, irregular verbs change their form in unique ways. The verb 'Hurt' is an example of an irregular verb, as its base, past simple, and past participle forms are all the same: 'Hurt'.

Examples of Irregular Verbs

Other examples of irregular verbs include 'Go' (went, gone), 'Be' (was/were, been), 'See' (saw, seen), 'Do' (did, done) and many more. Learning these irregular forms is essential for mastering English language fluency.

The Importance of Learning Irregular Verbs

Irregular verbs play a crucial role in English language. Without understanding them, it would be challenging to form correct past and perfect tense sentences. Knowing the correct forms of these verbs is a significant part of becoming proficient in English.

Common Mistakes with Irregular Verbs

Common mistakes with irregular verbs usually involve treating them like regular verbs and adding 'ed' to form their past simple or past participle forms. For example, saying 'hurted' instead of 'hurt'. Another common mistake is using the base form or past simple form when the past participle form is required.
