

Choose the correct indirect speech of “Sit down, Ali,” he said:

Choose the correct indirect speech of “Sit down, Ali,” he said:

- A. He told Ali to sit down.
- B. He asked Ali to sit down.
- C. He requested Ali to sit down.
- D. He commanded Ali to sit down.

Show Answer...

Correct Answer: B (He asked Ali to sit down.)

Explanation:

In the given context, the correct indirect speech is “He asked Ali to sit down.”

Option A, “He told Ali to sit down,” is not the correct answer. The word “asked” is more appropriate in this context as it conveys a polite request rather than a direct command.

Option C, “He requested Ali to sit down,” is not the correct answer. While the word “requested” implies a polite appeal, it is not the most suitable choice in this particular situation where the speaker is asking someone to sit down.

Option D, “He commanded Ali to sit down,” is not the correct answer. The word “commanded” implies a strong, authoritative order, which does not match the polite tone of the original statement.

The phrase “Sit down, Ali” is transformed into indirect speech using the reporting verb “asked.” Indirect speech is used to report someone’s words without using their exact words. In this case, the speaker is asking Ali to sit down, indicating a polite request. Therefore, the correct answer is B, “He asked Ali to sit down.”