

SUMMARY of the article “OIC inaction,” Editorial by Dawn, November 13th, 2023

The recent joint OIC/Arab League summit in Riyadh aimed at addressing the Gaza tragedy fell short of expectations. The conference, brimming with Muslim world leaders, resulted in no concrete action plan to halt the ongoing massacre in Gaza. While the summit included calls for a ceasefire and condemnation of Israeli violence, it lacked substantial steps to address the crisis. Amid the summit's luxury, the people of Gaza, reeling from burying their loved ones daily, remained at the mercy of Israeli strikes. Various suggestions, such as calls to sever ties with Israel or designate the Israeli military as a terrorist group, found little support. Despite the alarming death toll, the Muslim world's influential figures failed to unify in communicating a clear message that the massacre of Palestinians must cease. The helplessness of grand political gestures against Israeli aggression remains evident as the slaughter persists while world leaders either stand by or provide feeble appeals to halt the bloodshed.

Easy/Short SUMMARY:

A recent conference involving Muslim world leaders to address the Gaza tragedy fell short, lacking a clear plan to stop the ongoing massacre. While there were discussions on condemning Israeli violence and calling for a ceasefire, no substantial actions were agreed upon. Despite the death toll, influential figures could not agree on a strong, united message against the massacre, leaving the Palestinian people vulnerable to ongoing attacks.

SOLUTIONS of The Problem:

Global Diplomatic Pressure

Concerted diplomatic efforts to bring global attention to the ongoing crisis in Gaza, pressuring Israel to cease its attacks through collective international voices and possible sanctions.

Humanitarian Aid and Support

Intensify efforts to provide immediate humanitarian aid to the affected regions, ensuring medical supplies, food, and shelter reach the affected areas.

United Front of Muslim and Arab States

Create a unified stance among Muslim and Arab nations to exert pressure collectively on Israel to halt the attacks and establish peace talks.

Lobby for International Intervention

Urge major global powers and international organizations to intervene and mediate to cease hostilities, paving the way for a sustainable ceasefire and dialogue.

Global Civil Society Mobilization

Encourage widespread civil society movements and global protests to raise awareness and demand international intervention, amplifying the urgency of the situation.

IMPORTANT Facts and Figures Given in the article:

- The OIC/Arab League summit in Riyadh aimed to address the Gaza tragedy, with minimal substantive outcomes.
- Calls for a ceasefire and condemnation of Israeli violence were echoed at the summit, but without effective action plans.

- Suggestions made to suspend ties with Israel or label the Israeli military as a “terrorist group” found little support.
- Despite the significant death toll in the Gaza massacre, influential figures in the Muslim world failed to unite in denouncing the attacks on Palestinians.

NOT much was expected from the joint OIC/Arab League summit held in Riyadh on Saturday to discuss the blood-soaked tragedy underway in Gaza. And sure enough, the presidents, princes and potentates that hold sway over the Muslim world lived up to expectations, with no clear action plan emerging to stop the massacre.

As the Muslim world's rulers discussed the matter in a luxurious conference centre, the hungry, destitute and bloodied people of Gaza — dazed after burying their loved ones and neighbours day after day — waited for the next Israeli missile to strike.

In Riyadh, there were calls for a ceasefire and condemnation of Israeli violence, but beyond that little of substance, as the Palestinian president demanded an end to this “genocidal war”, while urging the US to use its good offices to ask Tel Aviv to stop the Gaza slaughter.

It is unlikely that those who matter in Washington or Tel Aviv will heed this request. Algeria, on the other hand, wanted Muslim and Arab states to suspend ties with Israel, while Iran recommended a boycott of Israel and the designation of the Israeli military as a “terrorist group”.

There were few takers for these proposals. It is indeed tragic that despite the murder of over 11,000 Palestinians in the Israeli onslaught, the high and mighty of the Muslim world — with their standing armies, tens of billions of dollars and vast economic clout — could not even agree to a common framework that would clearly communicate to Israel and its powerful backers that the massacre of Palestinians must stop.

If Israel were to be convinced by strongly worded statements and impressive conferences, the Palestine question would have been solved decades ago.

Meanwhile, the extermination of the Palestinian people continues, as the world looks on, as if tuned in to some grisly reality show — the livestreaming of a virtual genocide. Israel has upped its attacks on Gaza’s hospitals, all in the name of getting Hamas.

In the eyes of the Jewish state and its staunch defenders, slaughtered Palestinian babies appear to be a fair price to pay to avenge Israel’s wounded pride in the aftermath of Oct 7. Yet even some of those who had rushed to be by Israel’s side after the Hamas attack are beginning to have second thoughts; the French president has said Tel Aviv must stop killing “babies and women”.

Sadly, those who have the power to stop this butchery are either aiding Israel’s bloodthirsty campaign, or making weak entreaties for the massacre to be toned down.

However, hundreds of thousands of common people, with no political power but with great moral clarity in Sana’a, New York, London and other cities, are demanding an end to the massacre. Will the callous global elite listen to their voices?
