Correct Answer: June-October

Kharif Season is Between

There are two principal crop seasons in Pakistan, namely the “Kharif”, the sowing season of which begins in April-June and harvesting during October-December; and the “Rabi”, which begins in October-December and ends in April-May. In Indian Sub-continent, the season is popularly considered to start in June and end in October. Kharif crops are usually sown at the beginning of the first rains during the advent of the south-west monsoon season, and they are harvested at the end of monsoon season (October-November).
