Correct Answer: D (I am listening carefully.)

Explanation:

The phrase “I am all ears” is an idiom in English. When someone says they are “all ears”, they mean they are fully ready or eager to listen to what someone else has to say. It expresses a high degree of attention or readiness to hear someone out. The phrase “I am all ears” is an idiomatic expression that means a person is fully attentive and ready to listen intently. When someone says “I am all ears,” they are indicating their willingness and eagerness to hear what another person has to say. It implies that the person is focused and open to receiving information, advice, or any kind of communication. It’s a figurative way of expressing one’s receptiveness and interest in listening carefully to someone else.

Idioms: “I am all ears”

The English language is peppered with idiomatic expressions that add richness and color to our conversations. One such idiom is “I am all ears,” a fascinating phrase that piques interest for its visual imagery and metaphorical meaning.

This idiom essentially means that the listener is entirely ready or eager to hear what the other person has to say. When one says they are “all ears,” they indicate a willingness to give undivided attention to the speaker. This idiomatic expression can be traced back to ancient times and has been popular in English conversation for centuries.

Imagine the scene: someone intently leaning in, their hand cupped around their ear, trying not to miss a single word. This is the visual metaphor encapsulated in “I am all ears.” It is not meant to be taken, of course, as idioms often aren’t. Instead, it conveys the degree of attentiveness and eagerness to listen. This idiom is often used in both formal and informal settings, demonstrating its versatility.

So, the next time someone wants to share a story or a secret with you, you might respond with “I’m all ears,” signaling your readiness to listen, your willingness to engage, and your eagerness to understand. After all, the magic of conversation is in listening as much as it is in speaking.
