Show Answer...

Correct Answer: A (People who keep moving and changing are less likely to become stagnant or set in their ways)

Explanation:

The phrase “A rolling stone gathers no moss” is a proverb that suggests that people who keep moving and changing are less likely to become stagnant or set in their ways. Specifically, it means that if someone is always on the move, they are less likely to accumulate unwanted or unnecessary things (like moss) that might slow them down.

For example, someone who frequently changes jobs, moves to new places, or tries new hobbies may be more adaptable and open-minded than someone who stays in the same job or routine for many years.

The phrase does not suggest that moss is bad for rolling stones or that rolling stones should be avoided. Instead, it is a warning against becoming too comfortable or complacent in one's habits or routines.

In summary, the phrase “A rolling stone gathers no moss” means that people who keep moving and changing are less likely to become stagnant or set in their ways. It is a warning against becoming too comfortable or complacent in one's habits or routines, rather than a commentary on the nature of moss or rolling stones.
