Show Answer...

Correct Answer: B (To read or study intensively)

Explanation:

The phrase “hit the books” means to study or read intensively, often in preparation for an exam or to gain a deeper understanding of a topic. It is a colloquial expression that is commonly used by students and scholars alike. When someone says they need to “hit the books,” it means they need to focus on their studies and dedicate a significant amount of time to reading, researching, and learning. This could involve spending hours in the library, reviewing class notes, or working through practice problems. The expression implies that studying requires effort and discipline and that success in academic pursuits often requires a significant investment of time and energy.
