

What is the main goal of metaphysics according to Aristotle?

What is the main goal of metaphysics according to Aristotle?

- A. To understand the nature of reality
- B. To understand the nature of morality
- C. To understand the nature of knowledge
- D. To understand the nature of existence

Show Answer...

Correct Answer: A. To understand the nature of reality

Explanation:

Metaphysics is a branch of philosophy that deals with the nature of reality, including the relationship between mind and matter, substance and attribute, and potentiality and actuality. Aristotle believed that the main goal of metaphysics is to understand the ultimate cause and principle of all things, that is the nature of reality.