When will Pakistan's lunar mission iCube-Q be launched?

The Institute of Space Technology, located in Pakistan, announced that their historic lunar mission, iCube-Q, will be launched on May 3 at 12:50 pm. This groundbreaking mission is set to be carried aboard China's Chang'e 6 lunar probe, originating from Hainan, China. The satellite has been meticulously designed and developed by the Institute of Space Technology in collaboration with China's Shanghai University SJTU and Pakistan's national space agency, Suparco. The iCube-Q orbiter carries two optical cameras, which are specifically designed to image the lunar surface. The launch activity will be live-streamed on the Institute of Space Technology website and their social media platforms.

Historic Collaboration

This lunar mission marks a significant milestone for Pakistan, as it proudly collaborates with China's space program and its national space agency, Suparco. This joint effort showcases the growing cooperation between the two nations in the field of space exploration. The successful integration of iCube-Q with the Chang'e 6 mission signifies a significant achievement for all parties involved and paves the way for future partnerships in the global space industry.

Mission Goals

Chang'e 6, the sixth in a series of China's lunar exploration missions, will touch down on the moon's far side. The mission, carrying the iCube-Q satellite, aims to study the moon's surface in unprecedented detail. The data collected by the
