Show Answer...

Correct Answer: B (Geneva, Switzerland)

Explanation:

The International Labour Organization (ILO) is a specialized agency of the United Nations that was established in 1919. The headquarters of the ILO is located in Geneva, Switzerland. The organization's mission is to promote social justice and promote decent working conditions for men and women around the world. The ILO sets international labor standards, conducts research on labor issues, and provides technical assistance to governments and other organizations to improve working conditions and promote social and economic development.
