Show Answer…
Correct Answer: C. Paris

Treaty of Paris,

The Peace Treaty of American Independence, also known as the Treaty of Paris, was signed in 1783 in the city of Paris, France. This treaty officially ended the American Revolutionary War and recognized the independence of the thirteen colonies from Great Britain. This treaty was signed by representatives of King George III of Great Britain and representatives of the United States of America. The treaty was signed on September 3, 1783, and it was ratified on January 14, 1784. Philadelphia and London were important cities during the American Revolution, but the treaty was not signed in any of these cities.
