Which of these animals has the longest gestation period?

A. Cat
B. Elephant
C. Dog
D. Rat

Show Answer…
Correct Answer: B (Elephant)

Explanation:

The gestation period is the time during which an embryo or fetus develops inside the mother's womb or egg. Among the given options, elephants have the longest gestation period, lasting up to 22 months, while cats have a gestation period of about 2 months, dogs have a gestation period of around 2 months, and rats have a gestation period of approximately 3 weeks.
Elephants are known for having the longest gestation period of any mammal on Earth. During this period, the fetus develops inside the mother's womb and undergoes significant changes, including the development of their trunk, which is a defining feature of the species.

The length of the gestation period varies among different animals and is influenced by factors such as the size of the animal, the number of offspring being carried, and the level of maturity at birth. For example, small animals like mice and hamsters have short gestation periods, while larger animals like elephants and whales have longer gestation periods.

In conclusion, among the given options, the animal with the longest gestation period is the elephant, which can last up to 22 months.
