

Which state is called the 'Land of Golden Fiber'?

Which state is called the 'Land of Golden Fiber'?

- A. Bangladesh
- B. India
- C. China
- D. Bhutan

Show Answer...

Correct Answer: A (Bangladesh)

Explanation:

The country that is often referred to as the 'Land of Golden Fiber' is Bangladesh. Bangladesh is renowned for its production of jute, a natural fiber that is commonly referred to as the 'golden fiber' due to its golden brown color and economic significance. Jute is widely used for manufacturing various products, including ropes, sacks, bags, carpets, and textiles.

Bangladesh has a long history of jute cultivation and jute-based industries. The favorable climate and fertile soil of the region provide ideal conditions for jute cultivation, making Bangladesh one of the leading producers and exporters of jute in the world.

The jute industry plays a significant role in Bangladesh's economy, providing employment opportunities for numerous people and contributing to the country's export earnings. The jute sector has also played a vital role in the socio-economic development of rural areas in Bangladesh.

The nickname 'Land of Golden Fiber' highlights the importance of jute in Bangladesh's cultural heritage, economy, and identity. It symbolizes the country's historical connection with jute cultivation and the significant role jute has played in shaping its economy and society.

In addition to jute, Bangladesh is also known for its production of other textiles, garments, and agricultural products. The country has a vibrant textile and garment industry, contributing to its overall economic growth and global trade.

Which state is called the 'Land of Golden Fiber'?

Overall, ' reflects its rich jute heritage and the economic significance of jute production in the country.